Greetings from Grand Pacific Resorts

A few years ago I received an exciting call while on a family vacation in Honolulu. A resort in Princeville, Kauai, was looking for a new management company. Given that I was already in Hawaii, I decided to island hop to Kauai for a few days to experience this resort firsthand and kick off our due diligence on this opportunity.

The flight took just 30 minutes, but the contrast between islands couldn't have been more dramatic. Honolulu is the vibrant epicenter of Hawaii, complete with world-class shopping, high-end art galleries, award-winning restaurants, and towering resorts. Kauai, on the other hand, has a rustic feel that immediately captured my family's heart. The resort we visited did too, and we are now proud to manage it.

The following pages echo my experience on Oahu and Kauai. Keep reading for a look at the differences between the Hawaiian Islands, a simple tropical dish you can make in your timeshare kitchen, and little-known facts about the resorts managed by Grand Pacific Resorts on Kauai's North Shore.

As we look ahead, we're also thinking about the next generation. Our Core Purpose of "Enriching Lives by Creating Experiences Worth Sharing" extends out to all of our owners, including their children and grandchildren. Multi-generational travel has its challenges; however, it can also be the most rewarding experience. We're acutely aware of the different generational needs, which you will experience in our continual strides to stay ahead of technology and in the diverse activities we offer at our resorts.

These are just a few of the topics we touch on in this issue of Time Together. Please read through them at your leisure. Then take a few minutes to share your thoughts with us by clicking here. You will receive your next issue of this biannual publication in the fall, and we want to make sure it's packed with the content that matters to you, our valued owner.

Warm Regards,

TABLE TALK

The most memorable “time together” often takes place around the table. This is your place to share your favorite recipes, memories, and family traditions.

By Krystal

Last summer, when we stayed at Carlsbad Seapointe Resort, we spent almost every day at the pool or the beach. It was so convenient coming back to our condo at the end of the day, and we had tons of fun making dinner together most nights.

My husband Brandon in particular loves cooking, and this is one of our family’s favorite recipes to bring on vacation. It’s pretty quick and easy to make in a timeshare kitchen. You don’t need fancy equipment or hours to produce a delicious meal that the whole family will appreciate. The fresh mango and bright flavors are perfect for summer, and we often pair the tacos with corn, fruit, or even rice.

You can get mahi mahi at most grocery stores, but our favorite place to buy seafood is at Pelly’s Fish Market off Avenida Encinas in Carlsbad. The market’s been there forever and has the freshest seafood we’ve found.

Mahi Mahi Fish Tacos with Chipotle Mango Salsa

INGREDIENTS

1 pound wild-caught, skin on, mahi mahi
3 tablespoons olive oil, divided
 $1 \frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon paprika
 $1 \frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon chipotle chile powder
 $\frac{3}{4}$ teaspoon garlic powder
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon onion powder
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon oregano
a pinch of salt and pepper
corn or flour tortillas for serving

CHIPOTLE MANGO AVOCADO SALSA

1 mango, peeled and chopped
1 Roma tomato, chopped
1 avocado, pitted and chopped
1 tablespoon chipotle in adobo (from canned chipotle chilies)
1 clove garlic, minced or grated
 $\frac{1}{2}$ lime, juiced
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup freshly chopped cilantro
a pinch of salt and pepper

Directions

Combine the paprika, chipotle chile powder, garlic powder, onion powder, and oregano in a bowl with a pinch of salt and pepper. Rub two tablespoons of olive oil on both sides of the mahi mahi. Then rub the fish with the spice mixture until well coated.

Combine the mango, Roma tomato, avocado, adobo sauce, garlic, lime juice, and cilantro in a bowl with a pinch of salt and pepper. Toss well. This mixture will keep in refrigerator for up to three days.

Heat a tablespoon of olive oil in a skillet over medium high heat. When hot but not smoking, add the seasoned mahi mahi, flesh side down. Cook the fish about four to five minutes. Flip and cook another four to five minutes or until crisp and mostly cooked through.

Take the fish out of the pan and flake the fish with a fork, being careful to leave the skin behind.

beCause DESTINATION MATTERS

In the last issue of Time Together you read about Teresa Ponce, a breast cancer survivor who found hope and healing during a week at Carlsbad Inn Beach Resort. We also shared our new giving program, beCause Destination Matters, which was inspired by a fellow owner.

Now it's our pleasure to introduce you to yet another inspiring woman, 22-year-old Anisha. Anisha was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis (MS) in 2009 at the age of 16. This disease has no known cure, and patients typically face overwhelming fatigue, mobility issues, and other impairments.

After her diagnosis, Anisha assumed that MS would control her life and prevent her from achieving her dreams. As she explains, "I thought that I would have to make every decision based off of the fact that I have MS, whether it was a daily task or one pertaining to my future. Not knowing where MS would take my health was just so frightening."

Anisha's perspective became more hopeful in 2011, when the Anisha is not our only young friend struggling with MS. Several years ago, we met Tyler Campbell, son of NFL legend Earl Campbell.

"Not only does the scholarship provide a sense of monetary relief towards my education, but it is also a form of evidence that the NMSS encourages those who are affected by MS to pursue our educational aspirations. This encouragement shows that we are not limited by, nor controlled by MS. Personally, this encouragement helps me overcome my fears that are induced by living with MS."

National Multiple Sclerosis Society awarded her a college scholarship. "Not only does the scholarship provide a sense of monetary relief towards my education, but it is also a form of evidence that the NMSS encourages those who are affected by MS to pursue our educational aspirations. This encouragement shows that we are not limited by, nor controlled by MS. Personally, this encouragement helps me overcome my fears that are induced by living with MS."

Tyler Campbell

Tyler was a running back at San Diego State University when he was diagnosed with MS. He managed to play for another season, but he eventually gave up football due to his condition.

Then, last year, we launched voting for beCause Destination Matters through ResorTime, an online booking site that gives owners like you access to more than 1,000 resorts at exclusive rates. One of your fellow owners submitted Tyler's story to the contest, and by 499 votes you chose the National MS Society to receive a $2,500 cash donation. We were thrilled to partner with one of our favorite charities, especially when we heard that the donation would go towards scholarships for students affected by MS.

In March, we had the honor of presenting a check to the National MS Society. We also had the opportunity to meet Anisha and other scholarship recipients. We were so inspired by Anisha's fortitude we started a special First & Ten promotion to raise an additional $2,500 for scholarships.

How are we raising the money? It's all happening through ResorTime. Every time someone uses the special First & Ten promo code, they save 10% on their vacation and 10% is donated to the cause.

ResorTime's Renee Wagner presents a $2,500 check to students who have received scholarships from the National MS Society.

The First & Ten promotion continues, and we've already raised more than $1,600 from caring owners like you. We hope to make it to $2,500 soon. Check out our First & Ten page for more information on how you can get involved.

Someday, we will have a cure for MS. Until then, it's comforting to know that organizations like the National MS Society and the Pro Player Foundation exist to support and encourage patients like Tyler and Anisha. It's equally comforting to know that you and your fellow owners care about this cause and are joining us in the fight.

Hawaiï Not?

Like you, we love drive-to destinations and staycations. But this year, travel writer Kate Summers has us daydreaming about an exotic getaway to the Hawaiian Islands.

Which Hawaiian Island Fits Your Personality?

For most people, Hawaii conjures up dreamy images of coconut palms, rolling waves, and white sandy beaches. But did you know there are actually eight Hawaiian Islands, and that each one has its own unique feel?

Some of the islands are known for their modern vibe, while others retain a sense of Hawaii's storied past. Choosing the right island for your Hawaiian vacation depends on your personality and what you want to get from your trip. Keep reading to explore the four most popular islands.

Oahu

The Gathering Place

A graphic element showing the outline of the Hawaiian archipelago. The island of Oahu is highlighted with a yellow fill, while the other islands (Molokai, Maui, Lanai, Kauai, and Hawaii) are shown in black outlines.

Ideal for surfers and those who love exploring urban destinations

Oahu is the most populated island in Hawaii—hence its nickname, “The Gathering Place.” Here you’ll find the most tourists, as this bustling island offers legendary surfing, endless beaches, world-class accommodations, five-star dining, and vibrant nightlife. Oahu is also known for its art galleries, museums, and monuments, including the USS Arizona Memorial at Pearl Harbor, which is just a 20 minute drive from Honolulu on the South Shore.

Oahu

The Gathering Place

Enjoy an elegant seafood dinner prepared with fresh, island-inspired ingredients at Roy's Waikiki Beach. Make sure to save room for the restaurant's signature chocolate lava cake!

Hike the family-friendly trail to the Makapuu Point Lighthouse, where you may spot migrating whales between December and May.

Experience the real Hawaii in Honolulu. This iconic city is steeped in history and full of postcard-perfect beaches, outdoor markets, museums, and art galleries.

Hawaii

The Big Island

Ideal for hikers and those who prefer to keep their options open
“The Big Island” is exactly that—the largest island in the chain. Hawaii is also the most diverse of the Hawaiian Islands. Visit in the winter to snowboard Mauna Kea and horseback ride through tropical forest all in the same day. Hawaii is also home to two active volcanoes, Kilauea and Mauna Loa (also known as Madame Pele). Kilauea has been erupting continuously for 30 years, adding about 500 new acres to The Big Island.

Hawaii The Big Island

For some of the best ahi poke on the island—and the most variety of flavors—stop by Foodland, Hawaii's locally-owned supermarket chain.

The Shops at Mauna Lani offer free cultural demonstrations throughout the week. Try your hand at making leis, playing the ukulele, or hula dancing.

Located south of Hapuna Beach on the eastern shore, Waikoloa is just a short drive from the Big Island's favorite attractions.

Maui

The Valley Isle

Ideal for honeymooners, golfers, and foodies

“The Valley Isle” has a friendly, laid-back feel that makes it perfect for honeymooners and anyone looking for a low-key getaway. You could easily spend your entire vacation on the island’s pristine beaches, but if you’re looking for a little adventure consider hiking Haleakala at sunrise or golfing one of several championship golf courses on the island. Feeling hungry? Maui’s chef-driven restaurants showcase only the freshest local ingredients.

Maui The Valley Isle

Owned by Chef Peter Merriman, Monkeypod Kitchen in Wailea offers a delicious escape from the ordinary. Try the wood-fired pizza and homemade cream pie.

Maui Wave Riders in Kihei offers surf and stand up paddle lessons for travelers ages eight and up. Already know how to ride the waves? You can rent boards here, too.

A vibrant, family-friendly beach town, Kihei boasts six miles of beaches and picturesque views of the nearby islands of Molokini and Lanai.

Kauai

The Garden Isle

Ideal for adventurers and anyone who's feeling a little nostalgic

"The Garden Isle" is the least developed of Hawaii's main islands. In fact, most of Kauai must be explored by boat, helicopter, or on foot. Waimea Canyon boasts miles of hiking trails and the only navigable river in Hawaii. The Na Pali Coast is perfect for a sunset sail or morning snorkel trip. Everywhere you go, you'll see lush hillsides and small towns reminiscent of Hawaii's early fishing villages. If you want to experience Hawaii as it was 50 years ago, this is the island for you.

Kauai'

The Garden Isle

Tasting Kauai offers several local food tours, including a one-hour farmers market tour on Wednesday afternoons in Princeville.

Tunnels Beach was featured in the 1958 movie South Pacific. More than half a century later, it remains a tourist favorite and a great spot for snorkeling.

Revel in a plumeria-scented getaway on Kauai's North Shore. You'll find some of the best beaches on Kauai within a short drive of your Princeville resort.

Tips for Multi-Generational Vacations

Nine people.
Four generations.
Ten days.

How travel writer Christine Anderson spent a week with her extended family in Hawaii and lived to tell the tale.

When my parents announced they wanted to take our family to Maui for my dad's 60th birthday, I agreed to go with some hesitation. We had three red flags: I hadn't lived with my parents since I left for college in 2003, and we would be traveling five hours non-stop with my one-year-old niece and one family member with a fear of flying. But I'm not one to turn down a vacation and so, six months later, my husband and I boarded a plane to Maui and hoped for the best.

As it turns out, the trip was a huge success. I haven't enjoyed that kind of quality time with my family in more than 10 years. It was refreshing to reconnect with each other in such a beautiful destination and get to know the newer members of our family in a much deeper way. Our vacation together will remain one of my most treasured family memories.

What made our multi-generational vacation successful? I think a lot of it had to do with my stepmom's careful planning and that fact that everyone brought a certain level of flexibility to the experience. I've been on numerous vacations with my in-laws as well, and it seems like we get along best when there are clear expectations and everyone is able to voice their preferences while holding them loosely.

Here are a few suggestions gleaned from my experiences traveling with four generations:

Establish roles and expectations before you go

Who is paying for what? Will you be cooking or eating out? If everyone is covering their own expenses, establish budgets for food and activities beforehand. Figure out what activities are optional versus mandatory for your group.

2 Invite your family into the timeshare experience

When my family vacationed in Hawaii, we booked four separate hotel rooms for nine people. We could have easily stayed in multiple two-bedroom timeshare condos for half the cost and enjoyed even more square feet. If you're traveling with family, use your owner benefits to book your accommodations through GPX or ResorTime and share the perks of timeshare with your loved ones.

Take some time for yourself

Don't feel like you have to do everything with everyone. Maybe Grandma and Grandpa opt to lounge by the pool while everyone else hikes a mountain. That's okay. Embrace the diversity in your group and the fact that you may need a little space in order to enjoy your family the rest of the time you are together.

Push Yourself to Try Something New

My favorite family vacation memories center on new experiences, when a family member went outside of his or her comfort zone. In Belize, my sister-in-law got an adrenaline rush flying through the jungle on a zipline. In Hawaii, my grandma overcame her fear of water and went swimming for the first time since she was a kid. These memories will stay with me indefinitely.

Don't expect to do anything on your first day

When you're traveling as a group, it's important to have realistic expectations. That includes not doing anything on the first day of your trip. When it's just me and my husband, I like to jump right into activities. But I've learned that my family usually needs time to get oriented, shop for groceries, and settle into their accommodations.

6 Make sure basic needs are met

I'm one of those people who gets incredibly grumpy when I'm hungry, a trait I share with about half of my family members. We've learned through trial and error that it is important to have snacks on hand at all times. We also try to schedule regular bathroom breaks.

Get together after your trip to reminisce

I love cooking recipes inspired by my travels. It's even better sharing these dishes with family and reminiscing about the time we spent together. Even though we may not see each other every day like we did on vacation, reliving the memories reminds us that the heart of our relationships is still there.

Dear Tammy,

In 2013 I banked a July use week with GPX. We planned on exchanging into a resort in Tahoe but ended up visiting our grandkids in Boston the past two summers instead. Is it too late to use my credit?

Harry G. in Phoenix, AZ

Dear Harry,

It's not too late to use your credit, but you do have to act quickly. GPX credits expire two years from the start date of your deposited week. In your case, that would be this July. With your expiration date coming up, you have two options.

First, you can still book an exchange by visiting gpxvacations.com. If Tahoe is still your first choice, we have several weeks at Tahoe Beach & Ski Club, the newest resort in our family. Just remember, the last day of your exchange week must predate the expiration of your credit. That is, if your credit expires July 25, your exchange week must end before that date.

Alternately, you can extend your credit for up to 12 months by calling us at (866) 325- 6295. This is a particularly good option if you find an exchange week after July. We do charge between $49 and $99 for this service, depending on the length of your extension.

I can't help but ask—have you invited your family to join you in Tahoe? Our two-bedroom condos offer great value and extra space for multiple generations. If your credit is only valid for a studio or one-bedroom unit, you can always upgrade for a small fee.

Whatever you choose, I hope you have a blast on your vacation!

Tammy

Dear Tammy,

Is there any way I can book a two to three day stay in the Carlsbad area? My dad is coming to visit us for the weekend, and I'd like to find something more economical than $300 per night for a tiny hotel room. Thank you in advance!

Margaret L. in Carlsbad, CA

Dear Margaret,

For a short-term stay, your best option is to book through ResorTime. ResorTime is a nightly rental site that's available to you as an owner benefit. It offers a 110% Best Rate Guarantee at more than 1,000 timeshare resorts and hotels, including many in Carlsbad.

Just make sure you sign-in before you begin browsing (you'll enjoy up to 25% automatic savings, a benefit that isn't available to the general public), and check your inbox to see if there are any promo codes that would apply to your booking. If you'd rather not book online or need additional assistance, call (877) 477-7368 to speak with a vacation specialist.

Best Regards,

Tammy
